Then there is a clever adaptation of Japanese prominence in current affairs which is timely. A cute Japanese sailor with pointed crown and narrow brim is decidedly new and is developed in a number of fetching models.

Linen color is favored, and hemp is one of the popular hat materials. Dutch bonnets and pokes are liked, and the rage is for coral in everything, beads, bands, quills, willow plumes, straws, and what not!

There are combinations which sound daring, yet which work out in models admirable and stylish, as in the case of a royal blue and cerise turban. The hat is of blue rough straw, with cerise velvet loops and band, up-to-the-minute, and hiefily effective.

The butterfly is the favorite adornment, the idea being cunningly developed in lace, velvet, ribbon, straw and every material conceivable.

Round hats rolling back from the face are to have a great vogue. One model displayed is a dashing continen-V. Norman was able to be Tuesday after a long illness.

Cloaks, Waists and Suits.

The most attractive ideas in the designers' art are displayed in this department, where the new utility coat in particular found many admirers. Frocks in silk, volle, lingeric, the very newest in Eton suits, one-piace house sowns, tailored street suits, waists elaborate or severe to meet all tastes and requirements and purees, were in the bewildering assortment so effectively displayed.

Every woman will want to see these and scores of other elegant spring offerings. Where they may be found is told by The Bulletin's advertisers to-day. Wilfred Langlois has returned to Pair Haven after visiting his parents on South B street, Alphonse Fournier of Hunter's avenue has entered the employ of the J. B. Martin company.

Spring Hate That Are Distinctively New and Modish—Latest Ideas in Freeks, Waists and Coats. The suggestion of spring in the air Tuesday set woman's thoughts turning toward new hats and the dainty models offered for inspection were admired and "tried on" by hundreds.

At the outset it was noteworthy that there are many distinctive novelties in hat shapes, materials and trimmings this season. The approach of King George's coronation has given the designers a new motif, and the crown effect is sought for in many models and garnitures.

Pictures of King Victor Emmanuel and of the queen were shown and a fine entertainment closed with a ries which illustrated art in religious subjects. Rev. Mr. Kenngott's preciative and lucid explanations of a views he showed were listened to the close attention and he was warmapplauded at the close. The language mass handled by Joseph S. Adams.

On the new buildings in course of construction at the Norwich state hospital at Brewster's Neck the work has reached the same stage on practically all of them, and the 75 mechanics employed are now finishing the interior woodwork in the four ward buildings and the other structures being erected. They are also finishing the floors and the plumbers are putting in the piping for heat and for the general plumbing Round hats rolling back from the face are to have a great vogue. One model displayed is a dashing continental in maline of the popular linen shades, with fancy band, and three willow plumes at the back. White and black are to be much worn. A white chip has its high crown banded with black velvet, the trimming being white mercury wings, causht in place with a pair of tiny black wings.

FUNERALS.

Mrs. Lester Main. law, O. S. Barnes, No. 17 Aver, court, New London, funeral services were conducted over the remains of Mrs. Thankful Main, widow of Lester Main, by Rev. C. R. McNally. The body was taken to North Stonington, where services were held in the Miner meeting house, Rev. Mr. Adams officiating. Many relatives and friends were in attendance. Burial was in the family lot in Union cemetery by the side of her husband, who died March 12, 1895. Nearly all her life she had resided in North Stonington. She was a sister of the late Stilles P. Eccleston of Ashwillett. During her long life she was associated with all the good works of the church and was ever ready to lend a helping had in works of charity.

to the camp for tuberculosis patients in this county. In addition to those mentioned on Tuesday morning there are a number of others who intend to be present at the hearing today, among whom the County Health Officer Arthur M. Brown, Henry G. Peck, Judge N. J. Ayling, and it is expected that the board of selectmen will be represented. Mrs. W. C. Lanman, reasurer of the local branch of the Red Cross, will probably attend, as will Mrs. F. L. Farrell.

Clever Window Display.

Morgan Cronin, the clever window decorator for the Boston Store, has adopted this week one of the schemes employed by the makers of moving picture films to add life and movement to their scenes. He has a current of air from a fan directed towards the window setting so that the palms and other foliage accessories used in the decorations toss and sway in the breeze, adding a lifelike touch that is very effective.

Selectman Lillbridge Attended. Many were in attendance at the hearing before the committee on roads, rivers and bridges at Hartford Tuesday, including First Selectman A. W. Lillibridge of this city. Numerous bills relaxing to roads were discussed. Highway Commissioner MacDonald spoke and was asked many questions by the committee.

In the ourt of common pleas here on Tuesday the case of Costabert vs. the Montauk Steamboat company, a suit for $200 for the loss overboard of a bulldog, was heard. The arguments are completed excepting one and the case will go to the jury today.

Superior Court Session. The superior court. Judge Greene and jury, was occupied all day at New London on Tuesday with the case of the New Haven road vs. the Continental Compressed Air Power Co., which was started last week.
